the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently, safely and comfortably; older people should be able to participate in the community; older people should be able to access the services they need; and older people should be able to live in the place of their choice. The strategy is based on the following objectives: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to improve the social and economic conditions of older people; to improve the housing and transport conditions of older people; and to improve the access to services for older people.
